Thousands File Through St. Peter's To View Pope's Body

By WILLIAM F. SUNDERLAND
United Press International
VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Tens of thousands of mourners stood for hours in the rain today, waiting their turns to pass through the doors of St. Peter's Basilica to pay final respects to Pope John XXIII. Preparations went ahead for election of his successor. The Vatican announced that the secret conclave of the College of Cardinals would meet June 19 to choose a new Pope. The mourners gathered in the long line that formed before dawn outside the world's largest Christian church. Each paid homage to the 81-year old pontiff in his own way. Some prayed, some cried, and some simply stared at the richly-dressed body lying in state on a red-draped catafalque before the main altar.

Improvements For Elderly Promised

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — Gov. Bert Combs has pledged a concentrated effort to improve housing for Kentucky's elderly. He told the Kentucky Commission on Aging here Tuesday he would make housing for the elderly and the state's correctional institutions his major projects during his remaining months in office. Dr. H. L. McPheeters, the commission's member of mental health and chairman of the commission's housing committee, told the governor that from 500 to 800 residents of the state's four mental hospitals could live in private homes for the elderly if such facilities were available at reasonable cost. He suggested that the commission consider endorsing legislation to set up loans to finance the construction of such facilities.

Gary Herndon Is Held On Paris Jail Break Charge

Gary Herndon, 22, of Murray was one of four participants in a Paris, Tennessee jail break Monday morning. He and two others were quickly recaptured, however, the fourth prisoner Jimmy Simpson, of Paris, is still at large. Jail Trusty Fred Harvey told Chief Deputy Alvis Wall of Henry County that the four called to him about 10:30 on Monday morning and told him that "a drunk had set a mattress fire" in their jail cell. When Harvey went to pull the mattress, Simpson, the fourth, attacked him, struck him on the head and tried to kick him when he fell. They ran out the door. Herndon and the other two who were recaptured are held to the Grand Jury without bond today after they pleaded guilty to a charge of auto theft. The car was used in the escape attempt. Herndon also pleaded guilty to charges of escaping jail and was held without bond on that charge. The jail break charge included the offenses of destruction of public property (burning the mattress), and assault and battery.

Nine Young Men Get Stiff Restrictions

Judge Earl Osborne today handed down stiff restrictions to the nine young men charged with "unlawful" but without felonious intent, taking, carrying away, detaching and damaging property of value not their own. The case involved damage which occurred at the Calico Country Club in which golf carts and greens were damaged. Judge Osborne gave the nine sixty days in jail suspended on the following conditions:

2. Not to operate an automobile after 7:00 p. m. for six months except in performance of employment.
3. Must be at home by 10:00 p. m. each day for six months, with the exception of school activities or employment, or if with one or both parents.
4. Must not be arrested on any charge for one year.
5. Must not drink any intoxicants for period of one year.
Judge Osborne said that any or all the nine could submit to the restrictions, or serve the sentence, or if they chose they could receive a jury trial. He also specified that the state reserved the right to re-indict for felony. Judge Osborne continued the term of court to June 8.

Paul Holland, charged with incest, was given a two year sentence at hard labor at Eddyville. He changed his plea to guilty after having undergone examination at Western State Hospital.

Stalemate Is Reported On Hospital Deal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A stalemate today had settled over negotiations to transfer 10 United Mine Workers of America hospitals into the hands of the United Presbyterian Church's National Board of Missions in order to keep them in operation. Undersecretary of Commerce Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., said the negotiations broke down over a refusal by the miners' Welfare Fund to "justify" its $9.5 million asking price. The transaction between the UMW and the Presbyterians is contingent upon the church group obtaining a federal grant from the Area Redevelopment Administration, to cover the purchase price.

Talks Hit Snag
When the negotiations reached an impasse Tuesday, Roosevelt advised Kentucky Gov. Bert Combs to postpone indefinitely the special legislative session he announced he would call next week to deal with the hospital problem.

Combs planned to ask the Kentucky General Assembly to provide sufficient funds to underwrite an estimated annual operations deficit of $700,000 for the five Kentucky hospitals involved in the transaction. They are located at Whitesburg, Hazard, McDowell, Harlan and Middlesboro. The negotiations have been conducted under the pressure of a rapidly approaching deadline when the UMW would abandon the hospitals unless another group takes them over.

October Near Deadline
Under an agreement with the Presbyterians May 1, the miners' fund said it would keep the hospitals open until Oct. 1 when it expects the Presbyterians to assume the caretaker role. The UMW has taken the position that the Presbyterians, who would turn the operation of the hospitals over to a non-sectarian corporation, had agreed to the $9.5 million price. Therefore, it is between them and the ARRA to work out the financing at that price, without the miners' group participating in the negotiations. Roosevelt said, "I consider that our position that the miners' fund must be present as either a party to or at least an observer at the negotiations is a minimum acceptable condition to further consideration of this application."

CENTENNIAL SCRAPBOOK

The War for the Union 1861-65 in Pictures

No. 312 "The most tempestuous cavalry battle on the North American continent, typically boisterous, but typically inconclusive," is one of a wide variety of summations of the action on June 9, 1863, referred to in histories of the Rebellion variously as Brandy Station, Fleetwood Hill, Beverly Hill.

It took place six days after Robert E. Lee had set the Army of Northern Virginia in motion from Fredericksburg for his second invasion of the North. J. E. B. Stuart, proud over-all commander of six brigades of cavalry, had postponed his assignment in Lee's plans to assemble 9,500 horsemen for an astonishing display somewhat similar to the pageantry of knights in the middle ages. The setting, a plain near Brandy Station on the Orange & Alexandria R.R., midway between Culpeper, Va., and the Rappahannock River, had been chosen with consideration for the convenience of guests invited to the show. Persons came by the railroad. At night, tall campfires lit up platforms laid before the headquarters tents, for dancing to music of guitars, banjos, fiddles.

Stuart had to conclude his glorious show the night of the eighth. He could not defer any longer orders from R. E. Lee to cross the Rappahannock and screen the advance of Elwell's and Longstreet's corps.

The morning of the ninth, Stuart had a rude awakening indeed. Alfred Pleasanton's scouts could not have been blind enough to miss what was going on at Brandy Station. At 4 a.m., Buford's division of cavalry surprised Jones' brigade simultaneously with attacks by other divisions upon Stuart brigades strung along the river. The ensuing fight was neither victory nor defeat for either side, but produced a decisive turn of events.

Kentucky Builds Her Defenses Against Juvenile Delinquency

By Richard J. Clendenen, Commissioner

Kentucky Department of Child Welfare

Who are Kentucky's delinquent children — these boys and girls who daily are committed to the Department of Child Welfare, and most of whom go to Kentucky Village for treatment?

Their numbers have grown in recent months to a high daily population of 400, beyond the normal capacity of the State's institutions, even beyond dormitory space, beds, and blankets.

One-fourth of these are from Louisville and Jefferson County; another one-fourth from other larger cities of Kentucky. The others are from scattered localities among the 100 of so rural or semi-rural counties.

Some are very young — so young, indeed, that regarding them, the first observer is likely to be appalled, unbelieving that these are the product of experiences that justify their being haled into court. Yet there they are, in trouble from delinquencies that range from school truancy and runaway from home to petty theft, breaking and entering, an vandalism.

In many such cases, the tenderness of their years is in itself enough to support a strong conviction that the makings of their trouble lie outside themselves — that they are malleable and still unformed clay from their native environment, be it home or community. And seeing this, the observer takes hope that the final product will be redeemed to usefulness.

It is in this hope that the staff of Kentucky Village sets to work, trained for its fulfillment.

These children — what are they like? How old is the average child at Kentucky Village? What kind of family does he come from? How does he feel about himself? How does he feel about others in general about his obligation to others and to himself?

How did he go to school? What kind of trouble, and how much, is he in?

The composite child at Kentucky Village, if he is a boy — at 15 years old. He likes to dress like others his age. In his peer group — he may be a leader. Outside it, he is lost, unsure. He has no idea what he is cut out for, what he would like to do or where his course lies. He wants people to like him and look up to him, just as other boys do. He wants to make the team. He likes to get good grades, but rather to please his teacher than out of a feeling for the value of accomplishment. He's afraid of competition, because this might lead to failure; in which case he, too, often resorts to the sour-grapes attitude.

He has been conditioned — by experiences at which it is not hard to guess — to a feeling of doubt that anyone is out to do him any good. He is always defensive, just in case. He has an idea that all adults are squares, inclined to make big things out of little things, always disposed to look down, not really caring about him or wanting him to become one of them.

Golf Team Loses Only One, Hewitt

"We will only lose one man this year but what a gap he will leave." This was Coach "Buddy" Hewitt's remark about next year's golf squad. The one man will be Bill Graham, who graduates.

Bill Graham, the OVC individual champion for the past two years, has been playing near-par golf for three years, said Coach Hewitt.

The returning golfers will be Larry Mullen, Bobby English, Joe Belote, Lynn Newton, Paul Jett, Vernon Stubblefield, Jim Wilson, and Chennault Cockrell.

Coach Hewitt said the team would be aided by Fred Lancaster, Mayfield, who is returning to school after a year's absence.

Mr. Hewitt said he had his eye on the Illinois state high-school champion of last year and is going to the Kentucky state golf championship to try to recruit one or two boys.

"Although I would like to get Kentucky boys I will have to go out of state to get a few prospects," he said.

Asked about Murray's chances for next year, Coach Hewitt said, "We will definitely need to find at least two outstanding freshmen if we are going to be a real threat for the OVC crown."

The team will play the teams played this year, but he will try to schedule a few more out-of-state schools.

Bill Furgerson Does Well As Track Head

In 1957 a virtually unknown man in track circles took over as head track coach at Murray State College. In one short year that man, Coach William W. Furgerson, transformed what had been a sub-par track school into the front-running team in the OVC. And that's where they've been ever since.

Coach Furgerson is a graduate of Murray State College, where he was an outstanding football player. In his senior year he was elected captain of the team by the squad, and was named all-OVC quarterback.

He spent three years at Lafayette High School (Lexington) where he served as both head football coach and head baseball coach. His football team compiled an enviable 24-4-1 record, and in his third year was state champion.

In his first year as head track coach the Racers finished sixth out of seven in the OVC. The following year the Racers won the OVC title by 12 points and started their string of six OVC titles in succession.

Twenty-one points was their margin of victory in 1959, followed by a 17 4/7-point spread in 1960. In 1961 they captured top honors by 20 points.

The 1962 campaign saw the Racers sweep the OVC meet by a margin of 52 1/2 points.

This season the Murray tracksters amassed a record total of 102 points, outdistancing their closest rival by 37 points, thereby registering their sixth consecutive conference championship.

Coach Furgerson describes this year's team as his "best ever." And the members of the team feel the same way about their coach. As one of the squad members put it, "He's just like one of the boys."

The youthful-looking, well-dressed, calm coach is truly a "breeder of champions."

SEC Loop Faces Many Problems

By DAVID M. MOFFITT
United Press International
ATLANTA (AP) — The Southeastern Conference, long recognized as one of the most powerful athletic groups in the nation, is beset with problems these days that could tear it apart.

While it is too early for a definite conclusion, it appears that the biggest of these wedges may be the introduction of Negro athletes into this Deep South conference which has held the color line since its formation three decades ago.

It is no longer a question of it—but when. The University of Kentucky is expected to start awarding athletic scholarships to Negroes this coming school year. This means that Kentucky possibly will have Negroes on its varsity football team in the fall of 1966—and that's when the parting of the ways may begin.

The conference appears to be split right down the middle on the racial issue. Florida, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Tennessee and Vanderbilt, all of which have Negro students, have indicated they are willing to play racially mixed teams on a home-and-home basis.

But in the three deepest of the Deep South states—Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana—the other half of the Dixie Dozen doesn't appear as ready to accept Kentucky's plans.

Six In Doubt
The six questionable schools, Alabama, Auburn, Mississippi, Mississippi State, Louisiana State and Tulane, have declined to come out flatly one way or the other. They all have taken a wait-and-see stand.

The big question for most of these appears to involve the playing against racially mixed teams at home. Most have already played against teams with Negroes in games away from home.

But it is the general feeling around the conference that some, Mississippi and Mississippi State in particular, will not be willing to have integrated teams come to their stadiums.

Since it appears to be only a question of time before other schools, especially Tennessee, Vanderbilt and Florida, start accepting Negro athletes, any attempt to maintain color barriers by some SEC schools is bound to lead to scheduling difficulties.

Under the present rule, a member school must play at least six SEC opponents to be eligible for the championship. Personal differences between some of the schools have already limited the number of conference games that some of the teams have been able to schedule.

But the racial question is just one of several which plague the SEC at present.

Standards Vary
There has been noticeable dissatisfaction by some members, especially Vanderbilt and Georgia Tech, over the fact that it is academically more difficult for an athlete to get into some schools than others.

The institutions with the high academic standards have complained that good athletes they have had to turn down have shown up to haunt them at other SEC schools and have been battling for several years for uniform entrance requirements.

Still waiting to come to a boil is the accusation that Alabama head football coach Paul Bear Bryant and former University of Georgia athletic director Wally Butts conspired to rig last year's Alabama-Georgia game.

Both have denied the accusation and pending court suits brought by them against the Saturday Evening Post could provide an answer. If this accusation is ever proved, it could be a serious blow to the SEC although commissioner Bernie Moore insists the conference is strong enough to weather this problem.

'ALL BLUE'—James V. DeMarco, 18, is subdued, but good, in Albany, N.Y., after he went berserk and wrecked the Army Recruiting Office. Why? He was told he couldn't re-enlist.

Dear Abby . . .

HE'S JEALOUS OF VIOLET!

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 45 years old and have been married almost 15 years. My wife is a good cook, a good housekeeper and a good woman. She has one bad fault. She will spend lots of time watering her African violets, her one passion in life, but she never asks me if I want a drink of water, but it would be nice if she would offer it to me once in a while. Am I wrong?

MR. R. T. K.: You are the first man I have heard from who is jealous of an African violet! Don't suppress your anger. Emulate the competition. Turn purple and say, "I'm thirsty, darling. . . will you water me, too?" And don't be surprised if she tells you are already all wet. . . or simply to dry up!

DEAR ABBY: I like to work in my shop some evenings after supper. I do so almost every evening. My problem is this: A neighbor girl, 16, keeps coming into my shop to watch me work. I enjoy her company, but my wife is afraid the neighbors will get the wrong idea. What can I do to keep everybody happy?

MAN WITH A PROBLEM

DEAR MAN: No one can keep "everybody happy". But for a start, tell Sweet 16 (sweetie) that she should spend more time on her homework and less on your shop work. P. S. Tell "wifey" to grow up, too.

DEAR ABBY: Is it correct for a wedding to be held in the groom's church? The bride's church is a small one in a rural section, and has no place for the reception. The groom's church is very large and has a huge basement where receptions are held. Please print your answer because about 300 people are directly involved.

EDNA

DEAR EDNA: The wedding setting is the bride's choice. Traditionally, the bride is married in her own church, but if she prefers to be married in the groom's church, it is proper to have it there.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ELEANOR: He doesn't need to be told that he is burning the candle at both ends. He is only interested in where he can get more wax.

For a personal reply, write to ABBY, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, California and include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Abby answers ALL mail.

SMOKED OUT—Thomas Atello, 20, peers through a small opening in his barge hiding place in Astoria, N. Y., after police lobbed tear gas grenades to smoke him out. Atello escaped from Rikers Island Penitentiary, where he was sent March 1 to serve six months on "scofflaw" conviction and failure to pay a $1,450 fine. He swam nearly 10 miles from the island to the barge with help of an inner tube and favorable tide. He said he escaped because he "didn't like that place."

The New EMILIE LORING Follow Your Heart

"SUSPENSE" Jim Clayton said, "You open the meeting."

Jim looked up, saw Roger Clayton's alert eyes. William Bennett's puzzled expression, which was gradually changing to alarm. All along he must have guessed. That was the reason for the growing tension between him and his son Chester. Jim looked at Peter — at Jim Trevor, who reminded himself — met the steady gray eyes. She made a little pleading gesture toward him.

"Please," she said, "I can't." "Of course, Miss Bellamy." "Of course, Miss Bellamy." Jim looked at his watch. "While we're waiting—" "I was wondering who those other two chairs were for," Abraham Allen said. "If you have called strangers in here without authorization—" "Let them speak for themselves when they come," Jim replied. He leaned back in his chair, relaxed and at ease. "I first heard of the Bellamy Institute of Art when I was called in by the head of my law firm, Mr. Garrison, of Garrison, Harper & Jennings."

"Mr. Garrison told me an odd story. One of the firm's clients, Miss Gillian Bellamy, claimed that three attempts had been made to — shall we say, injure her? He had learned this from Mr. Roger Clayton, who was one of the governors of the Institute. Mr. Garrison sent me up here to see if I could find out the truth. Only Mr. Clayton knew my identity."

Jim leaned forward, her hands clenched so tightly together they hurt her. Chester sat with bent head, unmoving. Miss Pritchard was studying their faces with keen interest and the detachment that always distinguished her.

Jim looked again at his watch and suddenly Jim felt a thrill of horror. Something was going to happen. The net had closed on Chester Bennett. Perhaps he deserved it, but the pain was more than she could bear. She didn't want vengeance. She didn't want her father to suffer any more because of his son's actions.

Jim went on, tranquil, unharmed. He described his first encounter with Jim when she had been locked in the warehouse. He described the finding of the boxes with the identifying mark.

He told of returning to the warehouse, seeing the boxes removed, the useless attempt to break open upstairs, and the setting of the fire which would destroy the evidence in the locked room. He had even found where the gasoline for the fire
